The Important Problem

confronting anyone in need of a laxative is not a question of a single action only, but of permanently beneficial effects, which will follow proper efforts to live in a healthful way, with the assistance of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna whenever it is required, as it cleanses the system gently yet promptly without irritation and will therefore always have the preference of all who wish the best of family laxatives.

The combination has the approval of physicians because it is known to be truly beneficial, and because it has given satisfaction to the millions of well informed families who have used it for many years past.

To get its beneficial effects, always buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

The Best Plan for Furniture Buyers

Be a very cool-headed person when you buy furniture. Keep the fact firmly fixed in your mind that the less experienced you are in this important transaction, the more necessary it becomes to trade where you have implicit confidence in the dealer.

Don't be excited into buying more than you need. Don't buy at any store which does not agree to make good on any article which does not come up to your expectations after you have given it the test of time. Be sure all prices are marked in Plain Figures.

Buying anything "The Aaron Way" is as safe as putting your money in a national bank. We hold it in trust for you until your satisfaction is complete and assured. It is always here, ready to be returned to you, in case you think you didn't get full value for it.

We are not bragging about our methods. It is up to us to deal with you in such a way as to earn your trade. We'll sell on cash or easy payments. We'll go the very limit to see that we earn your respect, your confidence and your steady patronage. That's "The Aaron Way."

POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE AND PARTY TREASON.

Independence is sometimes a commendable trait in politics, but so far as we are able to observe the independence of the insurgent element in Congress is not particularly creditable to the insurgents nor capable of being defended upon any theory of policy or principle.

The revolt of the insurgents is primarily a revolt against the rules of the House and incidentally a revolt against the Republican Tariff bill.

The rules of the House have heretofore been discussed in these columns at some length. It is charged that they have been employed to stifle free speech or to put it in other and equally justifiable language to curtail the right of unlimited debate. It is granted that the Speaker and the Rules Committee are clothed with much power. But it must also be borne in mind that much responsibility is imposed upon them.

This is a free country only in a limited sense. We all give up a large portion of our natural freedom, that is to say our freedom to do as we like, to bow to the commands of none, to be subject to no restrictions whatever upon our personal conduct, and in return for this yielding up of these natural rights and making submission to the state the state guarantees to protect us in our lives, our liberties and our properties.

The Republican members of Congress are in much the same situation. They are entitled to a voice in the discussion and determination of party policy, but they are bound by the action of the majority if they are sincere, desirous of maintaining the supremacy of that party whose principles as a whole they support. The right of the majority to rule is as fundamental in party as it is in popular rule.

Members of the same party do not all think alike on all questions, but unless a man's party more nearly represents his principles than any other party represents them it is his duty to bow to the judgment of the majority. Moreover he should bow gracefully and be an pleasantly, not growl and grouch, not kick like a mule not bite like a bear, not play the traitor to him of whom he can't play the leader himself, not enter into unholy alliance with the representatives of other parties more or less in opposition.

As Republicans the insurgents cannot justify their partnership with wicked Democrats seeking to overthrow principles and policies dear to every Republican heart, regular or insurgent.

The revolt against the Tariff bill is a revolt against the voice of the people and the voice of a majority of the Republican in Congress. In short, it is political treason.

There never was a Tariff measure which gave universal satisfaction and there never will be. The Republican party is responsible for the wisdom of the Republican majority and a formulation along the line of the Tariff policy declared in the Republican platform. Loyal Republicans and honest citizens cheerfully bow to the will of the majority.

It is not pretended that the Payne-Aldrich bill is a perfect Tariff bill. Such a Tariff measure we repeat, was not formulated, and we may add with some confidence that it never will be. While it is not pleasing to the insurgents, or many of them, they should be willing to give it a fair trial before indulging in rebellion and inviting party anarchy and political death.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

United Press Special

WASHINGTON, April 12. A subtle form of odor is invading the new temporary court in the White House grounds.

No court could have been more picturesque. The roof is tan, the square within by white chalk lines is marvelously correct as they can be made. No fairer environment could have been selected for it not even Versailles itself where the habitues of the court of the grand monarque played to the same game in a setting so splendid that France went bankrupt in erecting it.

The new White House court lies under the lee of the building. The spring breeze wafts across it the soft fragrance of the magnolia blossoms and the hidden murmur of the playing fountain in the [illegible]. The robins hop across the green turf and the squirrels scamper about without fear of molestation. The picture is one of perfect, perfect peace, but [illegible] with sadness.

Which does Captain Archibald Butt, with Roosevelt far invaded in away Africa, leave the domain of profound serenity in order to evoke the glory of the days that were. Beekman Winthrop, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Ambassador Jusserand and members of that informal cabinet which is now but a memory, struggle to revivify the fading tradition that traced a parallel in the triumphs of statecraft and the victories of the female court. Even the untrammeled energy of Charlie Taft, who sometimes diverts his attention from more lovish pursuits to wade the ball over the fence or into the fountain lifts for momentarily the impalpable veil of melancholy sadness which drops its folds all the more closely after the burst of juvenile activity.

The White House tennis court that was [illegible] obliterated, the tennis cabinet is scattered to the four winds of heaven or almost as bad so that and it seems that efforts to organize another will be in vain. Of that old cabinet but few familiar faces are left. Beekman Winthrop, Ambassador Jusserand and Lawrence O. Murray are left behind. Gifford Pinchot, Jimmy Garfield, Phillips and the others perhaps they did play tennis, but the eyes of the political world are no longer centered upon the court. That day is past and the golden prize is far away in other lands.

The old court while it was entitled to provide for the addition to the executive offices was no such dream of [illegible] as the present court. It was a mere rectangle of clay, and it was surrounded by green canvas walls that flapped ungracefully in the wind. And how different the attitude of the players who galloped about under cover of that canvas screen! One could catch a glimpse now and then of a rocky figure clad in a shapeless sweater or an elongated academy that resembled the gymnasium chief forgotten clad in garments stained with yellow mud. There were no scouts. On the contrary they were grunts explosive and the wind of the swish of balls circumnavigating a mild wigwag and bolster as laughter would indicate that somebody had in all probability been hit in the eye.

When the old court was destroyed directions were given that a new one should be made in the place. This was done last fall. An army of workmen and the ground and the navy engineers brought their axmen up to play to make it a perfect replica.

How successful they were was seen during the early days of spring. There are the marbles, the sand pile, the colors and the fountain. There is the clode of the dusty bough of the [illegible]. There is everything that a court could wish but [illegible] of the court to be [illegible] and it seems that the old will be quite [illegible] for the [illegible] to play [illegible] at the White House.

When George W. Curton, who lives up in the northern corner of Geoksville, Pa., wants to be sure of proving his faith to the United States Internal Revenue Service he takes his hat off and tips it to the Stars and Stripes. Curton is a good citizen, the State of Pennsylvania, and the Federal Government do not take a back seat when it comes to a good citizen. He and two federal revenue agents were landed in jail the state of Georgia dared the National Government to collect them and for the last six months there has been a pretty legal warfare which has only just been terminated.

The whole controversy would have been avoided in the first place if Curton and some of the other involved had realized that the United States does not [illegible] such [illegible] to the Peace of John Bull. The Revenue service comes from the Stars and Stripes and it is where the Revenue [illegible] to be collected on. The National Government does not [illegible] that the [illegible] who engage [illegible] have not pay a tax to Uncle Sam for the privilege.

[illegible] make any difference to the National Government whether or not a man who went to pay the tax [illegible] prohibition district. It is already to sell the stamps which [illegible] that tax has been paid and which [illegible] that there will be no [illegible] interference. In one town in the dry State of Kansas over one hundred [illegible] stamps were sold last year and in the State of Maine, also a stronghold of prohibition, over 600. In Georgia, in the prohibition State of Georgia, [illegible] Curton.

Living up to the letter of the law, which is sometimes difficult, [illegible] by many, called from the [illegible] to the door of the [illegible] Curton concluded that there was a good thing [illegible] and settle the problem [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] Curton was making money as well as whiskey. The government stockholders and rangers visited the place from time to time and [illegible] that he was making [illegible] with the Government [illegible] Curton a good [illegible].

But this period came to an end last [illegible]. After some months the State [illegible] in violation of the revenue laws and they sent a [illegible] to [illegible] in the [illegible] the government stores [illegible] H. P. Hanson [illegible] workshop [illegible] information [illegible] the government [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] on the distillery by the sheriff, and he was placed in prison.

The National Government was arrayed against the State Government, agents of the one upholding the Treasury Department's regulations and officials and others supporting the trampled dignity of the State laws and courts. There were habeas corpus and other court proceedings brought and writs threatened back and forth both sides refused to recognize the authority of the other and a really ugly situation was created.

The row started early last fall and it was not until a day or two ago that an amicable adjustment was reached. The Government revenue agents pleaded guilty of "technical" contempt of court and the case against them were at once dismissed.

But poor Curton who had planted his faith to the Government stamp, was fined $1,000 with the alternative of going to State prison for a year.

SMOKIEST FIRE IN SCOTTDALE.

A Boy Was Scalded When Oil House at Mill Burned.

BOOMING PHYSICAL CULTURE

Recent Exhibition Has Given Impetus to the Y. M. C. A. Work—Scottdale People To Go To Hot Springs—Other Notes of News.

SCOTTDALE, April 12. There was quite a fire since the oil house of the Anchor Sheet & Tin Plate Company got on fire yesterday and was destroyed. The oil house that caught fire is the one at the Scottdale plant and quite a large sized brick building with timbered interior. It is used for storage purposes and in which to boil the oil recently used on the necks of the roll. How the grease in the interior caught fire is not known. The alarm was first sounded by the mill engine. It was then taken up by the fire whistle on the Scottdale furnace and the men responded and with the mill forces kept the oil in the building from catching on fire and burning. The oil house had some time, it is said, stored in the building. One barrel of oil did catch fire, and when the men were turned on it it set the burning oil in a flood over the ground, enveloping those nearby.

A great cloud of smoke arose from this and the surrounding buildings and it was the smokiest fire ever in Scottdale. The interior of the building, which is covered with a slate roof was burned out and the damage amounted to about $500.

Earl Hamilton, a young lad employed in the mill, in adding in the fire fighting was severely burned by heat about the right side of his face. He was helping and when a part of the wall and roof fell in they found it soon after and he was scalded by the steam. Medical attention was given and he is able to be out today.

Fifth Class Banquet.

The Junior Class of the Scottdale High School is getting ready for the banquet which they will give in honor of the Senior Class on the 1st of May. The banquet committee have been appointed and the committee have chosen Friday, April 29, for the annual affair. It promises to be a very hard one to beat and will be given the evening preceding the Senior reunion of the 1910 class. The Seniors will give their play on the afternoon preceding the commencement in the Grand Opera House.

Boosting Physical Work.

Above is an honest man on the town by some talked Physical Director Harold Adams for his energetic effort in bringing the Y. M. C. A. physical culture exhibition here Thursday evening up to the high standard of performance and many are saying that the audience which packed the Opera House to its capacity witnessed a performance which only be surpassed by professional athletes. Some of the performances exhibited were in the hall of Hyde Park and men in the athletic tournaments of every description are being planned and everything possible is being done by the wide awake Physical Director and Secretary W. J. Graef to promote the mania is in the mind, minds and muscles of the men here. They are meeting with unequalled success. The Scottdale association is in no manner laboring in the spirit of ambition but is merely making supreme efforts in the furthering of its aim—the manly young man.

Great work is also being done in the line of educational work under the general supervision of Secretary W. J. Graef. The educational work in all branches, spiritual as well as mental, has taken a decided upward trend.

Attending Presbytery.

Rev. J. C. Hutchison, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Scottdale, and A. S. Loucks are among those from here attending the meeting of the Redstone Presbytery at the East Church in Uniontown today.

The Grand Army Band was out last evening giving a concert on the streets advertising the production of their minstrel show this month. They rendered some fine and much appreciated music.

Is at Mont Alto.

Mrs. wife of Edward E. Tedrow who went to Mont Alto a week ago writes that she likes the place quite well and that the weather and surroundings have been very pleasant. Her brother, Postmaster H. C. Pretty has ordered The Daily Courier sent her during her stay.

Baseball Meeting.

There will be another meeting to discuss the baseball situation in town to be held this evening at the Central Hotel at 8 o'clock. The outlook seems good for local baseball and very interesting sport should be furnished with the talent right here at home without an imported high priced semi professional ball such as has been here in the past.

Farmers Are Anxious.

Farmers and fruit growers particularly are anxious as to what the weather is going to do, the morning having broken with quite a lowered temperature. Last evening there were hopes that a good rain was about to fall. Work is entertained for the future of the fruit crop if the weather gets very cold.

Going to Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Koff of the Central Hotel are expecting to leave within a few days for Hot Springs, Ark., to remain for some weeks. Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Kenney of the New Scottdale House are home from the winter spent in Florida, and may also go to Hot Springs.

"Our New Minister."

A beautiful play with an appropriate story at the Soisson theatre matinee and night Wednesday, April 13. Matinee 10 and 15 cents, night, 15, 25 and 50 cents. An excellent production is guaranteed.

For Public Sales.

If you contemplate having a public sale call at The Courier office and submit an ad in The Courier. It is you will have a crowd and with a crowd an auctioneer who understands his business will get the money out of the property.

DIGNITY CAST TO WINDS

When Mississippians Indulge in Finish Fight in Legislature.

Jackson Miss April 12—Investigation of the bribery charges in the Mississippi senate with reference to the election of United States Senator Percy caused Representative Frank Burkett and the director of archives and history Dunbar Rowland to indulge in a rough and tumble fight on the floor of the legislature and for a time threatened to break up proceedings

This difficulty arose from partisanship on the two sides of the question as to whether State Senator Dulaney offered Senator Bilbo $1,000 to cast his vote for Percy and then only paid $600 and went back on the balance or whether any bribe whatever was tendered

Burkett and Dunbar began a debate that led to the roughhouse on the floor Burkett who is a larger man than his antagonist was underneath and getting the worst of the encounter when he managed to gain the upper side and struck the smaller man a blow with a cane that rendered Rowland unconscious

STEEL BUSINESS IS GOOD

Judge Gary Says Corporation Has 5,000,000 Tons of Unfilled Orders.

New York, April 1.—Elbert H Gary chairman of the United States Steel corporation is back in New York after a two weeks' vacation spent at Hot Springs Va

In regard to conditions in the steel industry Mr Gary said

"Steel conditions are good There has been a steady increase in business since the seasonable lull in January The Steel corporation now has about 5,000,000 tons of unfilled orders on its books and new orders are coming in at the rate of 50,000 tons a day in excess of capacity This estimate of 5,000,000 tons is only approximate as it is bound to be somewhat less than the amount on the books at the end of December, because of the seasonable lull in business in January and February At the present rate of bookings our mills should continue to run at full capacity through the rest of the year"

UNCLE JOE IN FURIOUS RAGE

When House Refuses to Allow Him Auto Maintenance.

INSURGENTS GIVEN A JOLT

Speaker Cannon, White With Anger, Paces Up and Down the Floor, Shaking His Finger at the Insurgents.

Washington April 12—The insurgent Republicans of the house of representatives and the faithful regulars who have stuck by Speaker Cannon recently, hoping that at the proper time he would resign or eliminate himself from the situation in some way, have been given a hard jolt

After the house by a vote of 171 to 111 had refused to agree to senate amendments in the legislative bill allowing the vice president and speaker $2,500 each for the maintenance of their government automobiles Uncle Joe white with anger, left the speaker's chair and strode down on the floor of the house

The same Republican insurgents who gave him so much trouble in the big row a few weeks ago when he was eliminated from the committee on rules, had joined once more with the Democrats to strike out the appropriation for the maintenance of his motorcar

Evidently Uncle Joe took this as a personal affront and for a few minutes the feeling ran away with him to an extent not equaled in public at least within years He declared shaking his menacing forefinger, that unless those same insurgents joined with the minority to vacate the speaker's chair he would serve out his term as presiding officer of the house

Makes Known His Intentions.

"I am entirely content" said he "with whatever action the house may take But I want to notify you that unless during this and the next session of congress the Republicans upon this side that do not approve of the personality of their speaker have the courage to join a solid minority I will remain speaker until the fourth of March next

"While I do not ask and have never asked the appropriation for transportation to the speaker of the house, if you vote it I will use it just as I use it now If you see proper not to do it whether from the standpoint of broad economy or the standpoint of personal dislike to the present occupant of the speaker's chair I care not"

The Republican regulars cheered wildly at this and a good many Democrats applauded too either because they approved of Uncle Joe's fighting spirit or merely because they wanted to see a good row in the camp of the enemy Many of the insurgents appeared somewhat disconcerted

In the course of his brief talk Mr Cannon spoke rather freely on several other subjects He defended the Payne Aldrich tariff bill, denounced the "lying press" and predicted the success of the Republicans at the polls in November

When the speaker took his seat the regulars made more noise, but the temper of the house was not changed for on a separate vote taken immediately after Uncle Joe ceased speaking the elimination of the appropriation for his automobile was reaffirmed

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The story is told by Nicholas Trist. His chief, Senator John Calhoun, offered the portfolio of secretary of state in Tyler's cabinet is told by his friend, Mr Ward, that his time is short Calhoun declares that he is not feeble to die and if he accepts Tyler's offer it means that Texas and Oregon must be added to the map of the United States He plans to learn the intentions of England with regard to Mexico, through Baroness von Ritz secret spy and reputed mistress of the English ambassador, Pakenham.

CHAPTER II - Nicholas is directed to bring the baroness to Calhoun's apartments at midnight

CHAPTER III The errand causes Nicholas to miss a meeting with his sweetheart, Elizabeth Churchill

My lady, whoever she was, seemed pleased with her rapid temporary scrutiny. With a faint murmur, whether of invitation or not I hearce could tell, she drew back again to the further side of the seat Before I knew how or why, I was at her side. The driver pushed shut the door, and whipped up his team

Personally I am gifted with but small imagination In a very matter of fact way I had got into this carriage with a strange lady Now in a sober and matter of fact way it appeared to me my duty to find out the reason for this singular situation

"Madam," I remarked to my companion, in what manner can I be of service to you this evening'"

"I am fortunate that you are a gentleman," she said, in a low and soft voice, quite distinct, quite musical in quality, and marked, with just the faintest trace of some foreign accent, although her English was perfect.

I looked again at her Yes, her hair was dark, that was sure It swept up in a great roll about her oval brow Her eyes too, must be dark, I confirmed Yes—as a passed lamp gave me aid—there were strong dark brows above them Her nose too, was patrician, her chin curving just strongly enough, but not too full, and faintly cleft, a sign of power, they say

A third gracious lamp gave me a glimpse of her figure, huddled back upon her draperies, and I guessed her to be about of medium height A fourth lamp showed me her hands small, firm, white, also I could catch a glimpse of her arm, as it lay outstretched, her fingers clasping a fan So I knew her arms were round and taper here all her limbs and figure finely molded because nature does not do such things by halves, and makes no bungles in her symmetry of contour when she plans a noble specimen of humanity. Here was a noble specimen of what woman may be

I was not in such a hurry to ask again how I might be of service In fact, being somewhat surprised and somewhat pleased, I remained silent now for a time, and let matters adjust themselves, which is not a bad course for any one similarly engaged

She turned toward me at last deliberately, her fan against her lips studying me And I did as much, taking advantage as I could of the passing street lamps Then, all at once without warning or apology, she smiled, showing very even and white teeth

She smiled There came to me from the purple-colored shadows some sort of deep perfume, strange to me I frown at the description of such things and such emotions, but I swear that as I sat there, a stranger, I felt swim up around me some sort of amber shadow, edged with purple—the shadow, as I figured it then, being this perfume, curious and alluring'

It was wet, there in the street Why should I rebel at this stealing charm of color or fragrance let those name it better who can At least I sat sniffing to myself in my purple amber shadow as in no very special hurry.

At last I could not, in politeness, keep this up further

How may I serve the baroness" said I

She started back on the seat as far as she could go

How did you know" she asked. "And who are you?"

I laughed "I did not know, and did not guess until almost as I began to speak but if it comes to that, I might say I am simply an humble gentleman of Washington here I might be privileged to peep in at any boudoir, and call myself a gentleman" I added, and laughed freely

Half hopping, she was across the walk, through the narrow gate, and up at the door before I could either offer an arm or ask for an explanation. Some whim, however, seized her; some feeling that in fairness she ought to tell me now part at least of the reason for her summoning me to her aid.

"Sir," she said, even as her hand reached up to the door knocker; "I admit you have acted as a gentleman should. I do not know what your message may be, but I doubt not it is meant for me. Since you have this much claim on my hospitality, even at this hour, I think I must ask you to step within. There may be some answer needed."

"Madam," said I, "there is an answer needed I am to take back that answer. I know that this message is to the Baroness von Ritz I guess it to be important; and I know you are the Baroness von Ritz."

"Well then" said she, pulling about her half-clad shoulders the light wrap she wore; "let me be as free with you. If I have missed one shoe, I have not lost it wholly. I lost the slipper in a way not quite planned on the program. It hurt my foot. I sought to adjust it behind a curtain. My gentleman of Mexico was in wine. I fled, leaving my escort, and he followed. I called to you You know the rest. I am glad you are less in wine, and are more a gentleman."

"I do not yet know my answer, madam"

"Come!" she said; and at once knocked upon the door

I shall not soon forget the surprise which awaited me when at last the door swung open suddenly at the hand of a wrinkled and brown old serving woman- not one of our colored women, but of some dark foreign race The faintest trace of surprise showed on the old woman's face, but she stepped back and swung the door wide, standing submissively, waiting for orders

We stood now facing what ought to have been a narrow and dingy little room in a low row of dingy buildings, each of two stories and so shallow in extent as perhaps not to offer space to more than a half dozen rooms In stead of what should have been, however, there was a wide hall—wide as each building would have been from front to back, but longer than a half dozen of them would have been' I did not know then, what I learned later, that the partitions throughout this entire row had been removed, the material serving to fill up one of the houses at the farthest extremity of the row There was thus offered a long and narrow room, or series of rooms, which now I saw beyond possibility of doubt constituted the residence of this strange woman whom chance had sent me to address, and whom still stranger chance had thrown in contact with me even before my errand was begun'

She stood looking at me, a smile flitting over her features her stockinged foot extended, toe down, serving to balance her on her high heeled single shoe

"Pardon, sir," she said, hesitating, as she held the sealed epistle in her hand. 'You know me—perhaps you follow me—I do not know Tell me, are you a spy of that man Pakenham?"

Her words and her tone startled me I had supposed her bound to Sir Richard by ties of a certain sort. Her bluntness and independence puzzled me as much as her splendid beauty enraptured me. I tried to forget both

"Madam, I am spy of no man, unless I am such at order of my chief, John Calhoun of the United States senate—perhaps, if madam pleases, scon of Mr Tyler's cabinet"

In answer, she turned, hobbled to a tiny marquetry table, and tossed the note down upon it, unopened I waited patiently, looking about me meantime. I discovered that the windows were barred with narrow slats of iron within, although covered with heavy draperies of amber silk There was a double sheet of iron covering the door by which we had entered.

"Your cage, madam?" I inquired. "I do not blame England for making it so secret and strong' If so lovely a prisoner were mine, I should double the bars."

The swift answer to my presumption came in the flush of her cheek and her bitten lip. She caught up the key from the table, and half motioned me to the door. But now I smiled in turn, and pointed to the unopened note on the table. "You will pardon me, madam," I went on. "Surely it is no disgrace to represent either England or America. They are not at war Why should we be?" We gazed steadily at each other.

The old servant had disappeared Then at length her mistress chose to pick up my unregarded document Deliberately she broke the seal and read: An instant later, her anger gone, she was laughing gaily

"See" said she, bubbling over with her mirth, "I pick up a stranger, who should say good-by at my curb; my apartments are forced; and this is what this stranger asks that I shall go with him, to night, alone, and otherwise unattended to see a man, perhaps high in your government, but a stranger to me, at his own rooms—alone' Oh, la! la' Surely these Americans hold me high'"

"Assuredly we do, madam," I answered. "Will it please you to go in your own carriage, or shall I return with one for you?"

She put her hands behind her back, holding in them the opened message from my chief. "I am tired I am bored Your impudence amuses me; and your errand is not your fault. Come, sit down. You have been good to me. Before you go, I shall have some refreshments brought for you"

I felt a sudden call upon my resources as I found myself in this singular situation Here, indeed, more easily reached than I had dared hope, was the woman in the case. But only half of my errand, the easier half, was done

CHAPTER V.

One of the Women in the Case.

There is a woman at the beginning of All great things -Lamartine

A quarter of an hour later, we slowed down on a rough brick pavement, which led toward what then was an outlying portion of the town—one not precisely shabby, but by no means fashionable There was a single lamp stationed at the mouth of the narrow little street As we advanced, I could see outlined upon our right, just beyond a narrow pavement of brick, a few and not more than semi-respectable houses, or rather, row of houses, tenements for the middle class or poor I might have said The neighborhood, I knew from my acquaintance with the city, was respectable enough yet it was remote, and occupied by none of any station Certainly it was not to be considered fit residence for a woman such as this who sat beside me I admit I was puzzled

"This will do," she said softly, at length. The driver already had pulled up

So, then, I thought she had been here before. But why? Could this indeed be her residence? Was this indeed the covert embassy of England?

There was no escape from the situation as it lay before me I had no time to ponder My duty was here This was my message, here was she for whom it was intended, and this was the place which I was to have sought alone I needed only to remember that my business was not with Helena von Ritz the woman, beautiful, fascinating, perhaps dangerous as they said of her, but with the Baroness von Ritz in the belief of my chief the ally and something more than ally of Pakenham, in charge of England's fortunes on this continent

I descended at the edge of the narrow pavement, and was about to hand her out at the step, but as I glanced down I saw that the rain had left a puddle of mud between the carriage and the walk.

"Pardon, madam," I said; "allow me to make a light for you—the footing is bad."

I lighted another lucifer, just as she hesitated at the step. She made as though to put out her right foot, and withdrew it. Again she shifted, and extended her left foot. I faintly saw proof that nature had carried out her scheme of symmetry, and had not allowed wrist and arm to forswear themselves' I saw also that this foot was clad in the daintiest of white slippers, suitable enough as part of her ball costume, as I doubted not was this she wore. She took my hand without hesitation, and rested her weight upon the step—an adorable ankle now more frankly revealed. The briefness of the lucifers was merciful or merciless, as you like.

"A wide step, madam; be careful," I suggested. But still she hesitated.

A laugh, half of annoyance, half of amusement, broke from her lips. As the light flickered down, she made as though to take the step; then, as luck would have it, a bit of her loose drapery, which was made in the wide-skirted and much-hooped fashion of the time, caught at the hinge of the carriage door It was a chance glance, and not intent on my part, but I saw that her other foot was stockinged, but not shod'

"I beg madam's pardon," I said gravely, looking aside, "but she has perhaps not noticed that her other slipper is lost in the carriage."

"Nonsense!" she said "Allow me your hand across to the walk, please it is lost, yes"

"But lost—where?" I began.

"In the other carriage!" she exclaimed, and laughed freely

I turned and gazed back through the rear window of the carriage. True, there was another vehicle following us. We were by this time nearly at the end of Washington's limbed pavements. It would be simple after that. I leaned out and gave our driver some brief orders. We led our chase across the valley creeks on up the Georgetown hills, and soon as possible abandoned the last of the pavement and took to the turf, where the sound of our wheels was dulled. Rapidly as we could we passed on up the hill, our going, which was all of earth or soft turf, now well welted by the rain. When at last we reached a point near the summit of the hill I stopped to listen. Hearing nothing, I told the driver to pull down the hill by the side street, and to drive slowly. When we finally came into our main street again at the foot of the Georgetown hills not far from the little creek which divided that settlement from the main city, I could hear nowhere any sound of our pursuer.

"Madam," said, turning to her, "I think we may safely say we are alone. What, now, is your wish?"

"Home!" she said

"And where is home?"

She looked at me keenly for a time as though to read some thought which perhaps she saw suggested either in the tone of my voice or in some glimpse she might have caught of my features as light afforded. For the moment she made no answer.

"Is it here?" suddenly I asked her presenting to her inspection the sealed missive which I bore

"I cannot see; it is quite dark," she said hurriedly.

"Pardon me, then—" I fumbled for my case of lucifers, and made a faint light by which she might read. She pursed her lips and shook her head

"I do not recognize the address," said she, smiling, as she turned toward me

"Is it at this door on M street, as you go beyond this other street?" I asked her "Come—think!"

Then I thought I saw the flush deepen on her face, even as the match flickered and failed

I leaned out of the door and called to the negro driver "Home, now boy—and drive fast!"

She made no protest

"Nonsense!" she said "Allow me your hand across to the walk, please it is lost, yes"

"But lost—where?" I began.

"In the other carriage!" she exclaimed, and laughed freely

Half hopping, she was across the walk, through the narrow gate, and up at the door before I could either offer an arm or ask for an explanation. Some whim, however, seized her; some feeling that in fairness she ought to tell me now part at least of the reason for her summoning me to her aid.

"Sir," she said, even as her hand reached up to the door knocker; "I admit you have acted as a gentleman should. I do not know what your message may be, but I doubt not it is meant for me. Since you have this much claim on my hospitality, even at this hour, I think I must ask you to step within. There may be some answer needed."

"Madam," said I, "there is an answer needed I am to take back that answer. I know that this message is to the Baroness von Ritz I guess it to be important; and I know you are the Baroness von Ritz."

"Well then" said she, pulling about her half-clad shoulders the light wrap she wore; "let me be as free with you. If I have missed one shoe, I have not lost it wholly. I lost the slipper in a way not quite planned on the program. It hurt my foot. I sought to adjust it behind a curtain. My gentleman of Mexico was in wine. I fled, leaving my escort, and he followed. I called to you You know the rest. I am glad you are less in wine, and are more a gentleman."

"I do not yet know my answer, madam"

"Come!" she said; and at once knocked upon the door

I shall not soon forget the surprise which awaited me when at last the door swung open suddenly at the hand of a wrinkled and brown old serving woman- not one of our colored women, but of some dark foreign race The faintest trace of surprise showed on the old woman's face, but she stepped back and swung the door wide, standing submissively, waiting for orders

We stood now facing what ought to have been a narrow and dingy little room in a low row of dingy buildings, each of two stories and so shallow in extent as perhaps not to offer space to more than a half dozen rooms In stead of what should have been, however, there was a wide hall—wide as each building would have been from front to back, but longer than a half dozen of them would have been' I did not know then, what I learned later, that the partitions throughout this entire row had been removed, the material serving to fill up one of the houses at the farthest extremity of the row There was thus offered a long and narrow room, or series of rooms, which now I saw beyond possibility of doubt constituted the residence of this strange woman whom chance had sent me to address, and whom still stranger chance had thrown in contact with me even before my errand was begun'

She stood looking at me, a smile flitting over her features her stockinged foot extended, toe down, serving to balance her on her high heeled single shoe

"Pardon, sir," she said, hesitating, as she held the sealed epistle in her hand. 'You know me—perhaps you follow me—I do not know Tell me, are you a spy of that man Pakenham?"

Her words and her tone startled me I had supposed her bound to Sir Richard by ties of a certain sort. Her bluntness and independence puzzled me as much as her splendid beauty enraptured me. I tried to forget both

"Madam, I am spy of no man, unless I am such at order of my chief, John Calhoun of the United States senate—perhaps, if madam pleases, scon of Mr Tyler's cabinet"

In answer, she turned, hobbled to a tiny marquetry table, and tossed the note down upon it, unopened I waited patiently, looking about me meantime. I discovered that the windows were barred with narrow slats of iron within, although covered with heavy draperies of amber silk There was a double sheet of iron covering the door by which we had entered.

"Your cage, madam?" I inquired. "I do not blame England for making it so secret and strong' If so lovely a prisoner were mine, I should double the bars."

The swift answer to my presumption came in the flush of her cheek and her bitten lip. She caught up the key from the table, and half motioned me to the door. "And Where Is Your Home?"

GATHERED THE COIN.

Broker's Clerk Dies Leaving an Estate Worth $3,000,000.

New York April 12--When Charles Ferdinand Hoffman died on April 9, 1909, in Brooklyn his friends, his neighbors and his family regarded him as being a moderately well-to-do man As confidential clerk for Brown Bros bankers and brokers, in Wall street, he had a good salary, as Wall street salaries go, and as he lived modestly and was supposed to have invested his savings carefully his family rather thought that his estate ought to be worth several thousand dollars.

When Surrogate Ketcham of Kings county made a decision construing Hoffman's will it came out that he was worth at the time of his death almost $3,000,000, nearly all of it made by judicious speculation

By the terms of the will Margaret Hoffman, a niece, is to derive a life income from a trust fund of $78,000; Carolyn Hoffman, another niece, is to have an income of $50,000; Mrs Spagnola, an aunt, is to enjoy for life the income of $25,000; Wilhelmina Bardett a sister, is to have $35,000; a brother, John F. Hoffman is to get $10,000 and the residue of the estate is to go to the testator's mother, Mrs. Caroline Hoffman.

DR. HYDE'S TRIAL BEGINS

Charged With Murder of Millionaire Swope. His Father-in-Law.

Kansas City, Mo., April 12.—What is expected to become one of the most famous criminal trials in the annals of the middle west began when Dr Bennett Clark Hyde was placed on trial for the murder of Thomas H Swope, the millionaire philanthropist, from whom Mrs. Hyde inherited nearly $400,000

It is expected that practically all this week will be consumed in obtaining a jury and that at least two venires will be exhausted before twelve men are obtained. Not less than three weeks will be consumed in getting the testimony. Nobody expects Dr Hyde to be convicted, the general impression being that the jury will fail to agree.

Hotel Guests In Panic.

Dubuque, Ia, April 12—Fire started in the Julien hotel while 200 guests were asleep A wild panic followed and a number were injured. Sam Levy of Chicago was probably fatally hurt by jumping from a third-story window, Charles Evans of Philadelphia received internal injuries. Firemen rescued the other guests. The interior of the hotel was ruined.

Bronchial Tubes All Stuffed Up.

While a resident of Washington, D. C, I suffered continually and intensely with a bronchial trouble that was simply terrible to endure. I would have spells that I could hardly breathe, I would choke up, fill up in my throat and bronchial tubes, and the doctoring that I did and the remedies used were of no benefit to me whatever. I heard about Booths Hyomei being so beneficial in catarrhal and bronchial affections and procured an outfit. I received relief from the first by its use. I continued with it and received a cure. It is about two years since I have suffered at all from my former trouble.—Mrs. R L Pannell, 404 N. Augusta street, Stanton, Va., March 26, 1909.

Hyomei is guaranteed by A. A. Clarke to cure catarrh, croup, bronchitis, coughs, colds and sore throat or money back.

A complete Hyomei (pronounced high-o-my) outfit costs $1.00 at druggists everywhere. This includes a hard rubber pocket inhaler and bottle of Hyomei; extra bottles Hyomei cost 50c. Free sample bottle and booklet from Booth's Hyomei Co, Buffalo, N Y.

THE SOISSON.

"Our New Minister" Tomorrow.

The country folks of Hardscrabble, N H., come to the Soisson theatre for two performances tomorrow, matinee and night, when "Our New Minister" makes its too infrequent visit to Connellsville. It's a tax on the memory to think of a play that has caught and held the popular fancy that this remarkable comedy has the past nine consecutive years, during which time it has amused many millions of people, and is welcomed back with increased patronage on each successive visit. The life of a really good play is about three years, and when we stop to consider that it is over nine seasons ago since this city first saw the town constable of Hardscrabble, N H, and the rest of the interesting folks of that struggling, gossiping community, we wonder wherein lies the charm. "Our New Minister" will be welcomed with open arms and capacity houses, and carry away the pictures of that quaint country store, the railroad station, with its one train a day each way, and its general air of rustic simplicity, and imagine that we have visited this strange New Hampshire town in reality, rather than having witnessed a play. Matinee starts at 3 P. M.

"The Traveling Salesman."

"The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' successor to "The Chorus Lady," is the only attraction that ran through the entire summer in Chicago. This laughing success will be seen at the Soisson theatre Wednesday night, April 20 with the entire New York and Chicago company.

The same identical New York cast will play here as is now playing this day at the Academy of Music, New York city, headed by Frank McIntyre and Gertrude Coghlan.

How to Cure Eczema, Pimples and Dandruff.

We desire to say that when we took the agency for ZEMO, we were convinced that it was a valuable remedy for Eczema, pimples and dandruff. Yet we must frankly admit that Zemo has far exceeded our expectations as a treatment for skin diseases. We are pleased to state that we shall continue the agency as ZEMO has given splendid results wherever recommended. Our customers like ZEMO too, because it is a clean vegetable liquid for external use. ZEMO effects its cures by drawing to the surface of the skin and destroying the germ life that causes the disease, leaving the skin clear and healthy. It does not soil the clothing or linen and can be used freely on infants.

With every purchase we give a book-let on skin diseases explaining in simple words how any person can be cured at none of any form of skin diseases by this clean, scientific remedy. Graham & Company, Connellsville, and D. C. Eason, druggist, Dunbar.

OLD HOME WEEK AT MT. PLEASANT.

Success of the Event Assured ...ed by Liberal Subscriptions

ON PART OF THE CITIZENS

At Public Meeting Held Last Evening Splendid Reports Were Heard—Celebration Will Be For Week Beginning July 4.

Special to The Courier.

MT. PLEASANT, April 12.—A public meeting was held in the Bank Hall last evening when nearly a hundred business men gathered to suggest plans for the Home Week celebration to be held here a full week, starting Monday, July 4th. At the last meeting the question before the house the greater part of the evening was the securing of sufficient financial aid to carry out the plans, but the question most discussed last evening was what was to be done with the surplus money that would remain from the celebration. This was definitely decided as a motion was made and carried to the effect that all the money left over after the expenses for the Home Week celebration were paid would be given to the Recreation Committee, who will use it for a public playground for this borough. The report of the Finance Committee showed that a total of $2,125 had already been subscribed and not one half the business men had yet been interviewed for subscriptions. The Third Ward leads in subscriptions as over $1,100 has been raised down there. The Second Ward comes next with $800, and lastly the First Ward with but $200. In every case the donations have been liberal, and in some cases very much so; for instance the West Penn Electric Company subscribed $200 and free light for every family in town already using electricity for that week, and a string of electric lights a mile long to be used in the lighting of Main street. Burgess A. T. Collins called up President Thomas Lynch, of the H. C. Frick Coke Company at his Pittsburg offices Monday morning and told him of the Home Week, and Mr. Lynch said that he would have thought himself slighted if he had not been told of it; and furthermore said that he would consider a subscription which will likely be forthcoming within a short time. The financial report was practically all that was done relative to the Home Week celebration, but Prof. L. L. Grady embraced the opportunity of getting the business men together and gave a strong talk telling the need of Mt. Pleasant for a public play ground.

Mt. Pleasant has a certain number of people who are well provided financially, have formed a company and have secured a site containing four and four fourth acres, perfectly level, and centrally located, which has been surveyed and within a few weeks will be fitted up as a play ground. All kinds of recreation will be indulged in by every child or grown up person in town for, as Prof. Grady said, "there is a lower limit to a person taking recreation but no upper limit as men and women should classify themselves with the children and take part in the recreation." The Recreation Committee now in charge of the work superintended by this company expects to have the grounds opened and everything in full swing within a month. The definite plans will be made known in the State Armory May 20th, when G. L. Johnson of Pittsburg will speak concerning recreation grounds.

The meeting was then adjourned and the Executive Committee was instructed to meet Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

Local Brevities.

Miss Agnes, the 12 years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John True of Center avenue, narrowly escaped death Yesterday afternoon when she accidentally ate a quantity of what is generally known as "Rough on Rats." The poison was in some way close to with the food she was eating and while she was still eating it she became very ill. Physicians quickly gave her an antidote which counteracted the effects of the poison and saved her life. The girl is still very weak from her experience and is suffering from a complete nervous breakdown.

The advance sale of tickets for the Comic talent play, "Between the Acts," to be given by members of the junior class of the High School, has been very large and a packed house is promised for the occasion. The proceeds are for a worthy cause, that of building up the public school library which at present is in a bad condition. Rehearsals are being held every night and the play promises to be the best home talent production ever staged at this place. The play is under the direction of Prof. R. W. Shaum of the township schools.

Joseph Rice, a roofer, employed by the Metz Brothers' Roofing Company, narrowly escaped death Monday morning while repairing a roof on the East End residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Horner. The slates, it seem, were wet and slippery and in some way Rice lost his footing and fell to the ground, some 40 feet below. Luckily, however, he alighted on a pile of shingles which probably saved his life, and he escaped with a sprained ankle.

The first automobile truck that was ever used in town is now being used by the plumbing firm of L. L. Mills & Company. The machine is of a late pattern and contains some very fine machinery.

Adam Porter and Charles Bossart were at the head of a party of two score of people from town who travelled in a hay wagon to the country home of Mrs. Mary Hunter north of town last evening, when they tendered that lady a most enjoyable surprise in honor of her birthday. An old-fashioned dance was held and a general good time indulged in by all present. At a late hour an elaborate lunch was served by the ladies in the party who came provided with well filled lunch baskets.

A double surprise party was tendered Mrs. William Imbof, a former resident of this place, but now of Greensburg, and Mrs. P. C. Pointer at the latter's home last evening, in honor of the ladies' birthdays. Two score of people were present and an enjoyable time was had. Lunch was served at midnight.

Mrs. Sarah Barton of Yoder avenue, has gone to relatives in Pittsburg.

Joseph Spilenburger of Vine street is able to be around again after a month's confinement with rheumatism.

You'll Appreciate

when you come to buy any clothes here, overcoat or a suit, how very important all-wool is. There's a lot of clothing made that isn't all-wool; made to be sold to those who don't know better. But our

Hart Schaffner & Marx

Clothes are always all-wool; and that's one thing you can always depend on. If you want to be sure of quality, be sure of the name. We guarantee these goods; but we don't really need to; they guarantee themselves.

Delightful Millinery

Exclusive Styles That Add to Your Dress the Touch of Individuality.

One of the busiest spots in our store is the Millinery Department—and why shouldn't it be with its attractive creations in such charming variety. There is a shape for every face and the all-pervading atmosphere of refined taste combines in harmony, without a jarring note, the favored colors of Fashion.

There are some exceptionally good models for Misses and Children. We want to especially mention the "Parkway" and "Countess." The former is a school and street hat in Panama and Java with wide, pliable brim that can be shaped to suit the wearer; esarf trimmed and very attractive. The Countess is a burnt straw sailor with velvet tailored bow; a popular hat for street wear.

An attractive collection of new models at this popular price. They are really worth more but we are trying to see how much style and beauty we can put into our $5.00 hats—and when you see them you will agree that it is a very delightful assortment. There are tuurbans, toques, mushroom shapes and roll fronts; made of Pyroxaline and Raime braid trimmed with flowers, ribbons, foliage and wings; a larger line than we have ever before carried.

Oxfords, Pumps and Sandals

These low cuts embrace the smartest and best styles and are at the same time an important item in the "keep cool" prescription. Our Shoes are the product of the best manufacturers in America. They are non-advertised lines—you get in added values what other manufacturers put into advertising campaigns. Particular attention is given to the shape of the models and our careful service insures the most up-to-date styles—with a maximum of comfort. The strong demand indicates that these warm weather shoes will be even more popular than last season.
